Sophia and I are going to get students to contribute a slide in advance and then they present their slide on the call

I like the idea of getting students to use the voice notes to do a talk like an expert style task!

Anonymous 1h
I love the directed tasks to help differentiate the work for students

Love trying to get more engagement in live sessions - sending recent news article in econ and discussion questions first

DT
We can definitely encourage voice note responses as an alternative!

Live meeting starters! Don't know why I didn't think of them!

Record a lesson based on looking at a model written answer and how it links to mark scheme.

English - live chat FR
A little like Emily, we use the students' work to form the content of our live meetings. We collate which answers students have struggled with and then discuss them together. We also share good answers with the rest of the class so they can have a model answer.

Coming up with a Question for their peers would be great for A level. I bet they try to trick and challenge one another which is great for misconceptions etc

I have been trying socrative for the first time, which has been really good... so I might try and do directed tasks based on the results to make more use of the socrative results

Love the idea of getting students to use voice notes and verbalise their ideas.

Anonymous 1h
I like the idea of video recording exemplar answers to explain to the kids JB

Love the idea of a live meeting starter - especially when they're quite quiet at the beginning!

Similar to Drama, year 9 next week are going to record themselves reading aloud in French, and the video will include an example and pronunciation tips

Anonymous 1h
I like the idea of sending out the questions for discussion on the live lesson prior to the lesson

Anonymous 1h
Hexagons is good, I'll use that to check understanding from previous week.

Like the articulate answers for them to talk through content learnt done Plan to do Socrative quizzes on topics and then like the tailored tasks shown by science

Anonymous 1h
Could also use pre-tasks to make love calls more meaningful

Using voice notes for students to answer or even ask challenging questions. I like the idea of setting the quiz as a starter to direct students to a task rather than setting the quiz as a plenary

Anonymous 1h
Agree - this would work so well for All year groups.

Calum - asking them to create their own WWW and EBI after marking the work, then seeing if they can improve the EBI next week.

Include an exercise that week, that requires them to acknowledge and act on the feedback from last week? a simple highlighting of EBIs?

Reviewing previous week: Hayleigh
I have been starting every PowerPoint with a recap of the previous week in voice notes.. I get them to listen to the voice notes and make any additional notes and questions for the live

This has been hard but encouraging students to respond back even with a quick showbie comment is worthwhile
Getting them to upload self assessment and give themselves ebs with own comments

We set work for them to complete the week immediately after so we have time to mark and then their work for the following week is to use the feedback to improve a specific area with extension tasks for those with few improvements. Cat
